

What the Decanter team is drinking this Christmas

Christmas 2020 may not be quite as planned, but it's still an occasion to open a good bottle. Find out which wines Decanter team members are planning to drink on 25 December...

Ellie Douglas
December 24, 2020

Credit: Karolina Grabowska / Pexels

James Button, Regional Editor, Italy

Rather than skiing as we normally do as a family, this year will be spent at home with a new addition to the family in the form of our second daughter.

That means fewer Austrian blends and more Italian wines in my Christmas schedule, and I'm looking forward to sharing some bubbles with my wife – who can now drink again!

Ferrari Trentodoc and Berlucchi Franciacorta should fit the bill. Abruzzo Pecorino is something that deserves a place on the Christmas table, as the seam of acidity cuts through rich food perfectly. I just need to decide which is my favourite.

In terms of reds, it's a toss up between Tenuta Luce 2017 and Tenuta di Trinoro 1998. Perhaps opening both is the best option...